The Law Society

Civil Justice

What is the Civil Justice Section?

The deregulation of the legal services market and the overhaul of litigation costs and funding following the Jackson Review will make the marketplace for litigators, mediators and arbitrators in 2013 more challenging than it has ever been.

The Law Society's Civil Justice Section will provide the support, information and insight you need to understand the changes and how they will affect you, and to ensure that your dispute resolution department or team remains a profitable and central part of your business.

Membership offers you regular news, commentary and updates on key civil justice issues, together with training and developmental opportunities in the areas of most importance to practitioners.

You will also have the opportunity to contribute your views to the Section's executive committee, and to join the committee to make your voice heard on civil justice policy and practice.

How to join

To join, complete and return the membership form on this leaflet together with your payment. You can also download an application form from www.lawsociety.org.uk/civiljustice.

Membership is open to all practising solicitors.
