

Solicitors and solicitors' employees on the Immigration and Asylum Accreditation Scheme can help with asylum, general immigration and business-related immigration applications. They also advise on aspects of welfare, the legal system, legal aid, taxation and corporate issues that affect immigrants and asylum seekers.

Mental Health Review Tribunal Accreditation Scheme members advise and represent patients at tribunal hearings where detained patients' cases are reviewed and discharge decisions are taken. Members often offer legal advice on other aspects of mental illness and incapacity.

Personal Injury Accreditation Scheme members provide advice and representation to people who have sustained personal injury and to relatives of those who have been fatally injured as the result of an act of alleged negligence and/or breach of statutory duty.

Planning Law Accreditation Scheme members advise on all aspects of the planning process - including planning applications and appeals, enforcement, listed building and conservation area applications, compulsory purchases, tree preservation orders, development on contaminated land and other situations in which special planning controls apply.

Visit www.lawsociety.org.uk/accreditation for further details of services offered by Law Society accredited specialists.

More information

This is one of a series of leaflets produced by the Law Society. Other leaflets in the series are listed below. You can get them from your solicitor or from www.lawsociety.org.uk/commonlegalproblems

- Your guide to using a solicitor
- Your guide to renting out your property
- Your guide to buying a home
- Your guide to renting a home
- Your guide to making a will
- Your guide to getting a divorce
- Your guide to problems at work
- Your guide to setting up in business
- Your guide to making a personal injury claim
- Your guide to financial matters for the elderly
- Your guide to setting up home with your partner
- Your guide to probate
- Your guide to claiming asylum

Look for Lexcel - the mark of excellence

Solicitor's stamp here

Printed on recycled paper

expert solicitors

The Law Society

The Law Society 113 Chancery Lane London WC2A 1PL
Phone: 020 7242 1222 www.lawsociety.org.uk

While we have made every effort to provide accurate information, the law is always changing and affects each person differently. This leaflet is no substitute for specific advice about you personally and we will not be liable to you if you rely on this leaflet.

Ref: LSeexpert: Version 2, 2011

Are you looking for expert legal help?
Learn how to find a solicitor whose expert skills and experience have been accredited by the Law Society.

Expert help...

Many solicitors concentrate their work in one or two areas of law. They can offer you skilled, professional legal advice and services.

Some solicitors are accredited by the Law Society in their area of specialisation. Law Society accredited specialists - known as accreditation scheme members - have expert skills, knowledge and experience that are tested and certified against the highest standards.

Scheme members offer expert help with problems and issues in many areas of law:

- Children law
- Civil and commercial mediation
- Clinical negligence
- Conveyancing
- Criminal litigation
- Family law
- Family mediation
- Immigration law
- Mental health review tribunals
- Personal injury
- Planning law

Where to look

At www.lawsociety.org.uk/findasolicitor search for the contact details of a scheme member near you. Choose more search options, select the scheme from the drop down menu, search, and then enter your postcode. The symbol (above) means a scheme member works at the firm.

In telephone directories or on the high street, look for firms of solicitors that display Law Society accredited logos; they are exclusively displayed by firms with scheme members.

Contact a Children Panel Accreditation Scheme member if you need specialist help in matters such as care proceedings, family breakdowns, residence, contact, emergency protection, adoption, parental responsibility and human rights.

Mediation involves a trained, neutral third party using their skills to bring two sides in a dispute to a resolution, without resorting to litigation. While Civil and Commercial Mediation Accreditation Scheme members may specialise in certain kinds of disputes, they have good general dispute-resolution and mediation skills.

Clinical Negligence Accreditation Scheme members provide advice and assistance with claims arising from medical or dental negligence matters.

Conveyancing Quality Scheme. Buying or selling a home is one of the biggest transactions most of us ever make. By choosing a member of this scheme you can be sure that your conveyancer meets the high standards set by the Law Society, and that you will get a professional, high quality conveyancing service.

Criminal Litigation Accreditation Scheme. If you have been charged with a criminal offence, a member of this scheme will be able to give you advice. They are experienced in helping with criminal charges. Motoring offences are the most common.

Family Law Accreditation Scheme members specialise in family law issues such as divorce, separation, division of family assets, cohabitation, maintenance and family disputes.

Family Law Accreditation Scheme (Advanced) members provide advice and assistance to clients in more complex family law cases.

Contact a Family Mediation Accreditation Scheme member if you need mediation services in family and matrimonial disputes. Family mediators may specialise in children-only or financial-only mediation.